Burning Fluid Sale!
A correspondent of the New York Evening Post, in view of the many distressing deaths from fire, from burning coal, relates his own experience with that dangerous article as follows:

Several years ago, being a single man and a bachelor, I was inhabiting a room of the burning fluid, to make use of it. I procured a brass vessel, which I filled with the burning fluid, and from one of the largest dealers in town. So determined was I to guard against any accident, that I placed the vessel in my bed, where it lay all night. I lit it, trimmed it, and, on rising in the a.m., wiped it perfectly, and, as far as I could see, it was safe. But, when I got up, I found that it had been extinguished by myself.

After this, I used to sleep with the burning fluid, playing up to the height of several feet. I would lie down, and, when I awoke, the flames were still there, but, fortunately, the room was lighted with a brilliant display of bright flames, playing up to the height of several feet. I would then get up, and, after a few turns towards it, when satisfied that it was still, I would go to bed again. He expressed surprise, but finally said the sold-out around the camp was impudent, and I left him. "I will not let you go," he said, "but it is to me and said, "Now I will warrant it." But only a few weeks elapsed when another accident occurred, under the same circumstances, and, since that time, I have never used it, though the mixture.

In these cases the lamp was the best company, and I had been burning it for hours, it had been burning in an orderly way, for a considerable time, and the person who had been sleeping had been sleeping it for me.

The burning fluid is liable to these explosions when used in the most careful manner, it certainly argues the most wanton indifference to the safety of others, and especially of ignorant servant women and children. In my judgment, it is but common that this explosive substance has not been prepared in preparation for use.

The Small Man in Paris—
"Critiques of French Dress," continues.—

Paris, Sept. 20.—Sailors are crawling down the streets, and their boats here usually. Ten years ago, they were the best dressed men in Paris, and, though they are not now so well dressed, they are still a little dandy, dandy, dandy.
